LOOKING AFTER MILK DEALERS: Inspector Dockery Finds Some Without a Permit Son Francisco Chronicle (1896)-Current File), Jun 18, 1896. ProQuest Historical Newspapers: San Francisco Chronicle no. 15.

LOOKING AFTER MILK DEALERS.

Inspector Dockery Finds Some Without a Permit.

Milk Inspector Dockery spent Supday night and Monday morning among the dairy wagons. He got around to all parts of the city and tested the contents of forty-five different wagon-loads of milk. He chose that particular night of the week to see how well the milkmen were living up to the requirements of the ordinance because he figured that they would not be expecting him. or the forty-five wagon-loads tested alt wer- up to grade except one, a wagon belonging to the Sunnyside Dairy Company, driven by Thomas Mitchell. There was far too much water in this load of milk, so it was all dumped into the street and a warrant was taken out for Mitchell's arrest.

Tuesday Dockery spent in an investigation of how well the ordinance requiring a permit for those who retail milk is being lived up to. The result of the day's work was that warrants will be issued for the following for selling milk without a license: м. Hencken, grocer, Hyde and Green streets: James Reilly, grocer. 1710 Leavenworth street; J. F. Bullwinkel, Pacific and Powell streets; L. Plivano, grocer, 807 Pacific street; Peter Coloburos, grocer, 1213 Powell; Slavin Brothers, grocers, 1641 Hyde; D. Giannini, fruit store, 2001 Hyde; Frank Chichizola, grocer. 1737 Leavenworth; William Castell, fruit dealer, 1521 Hyde; and John Kenny, grocer, 1406 Pacific-

The investigation among grocers and fruit deviers will be continued for a while, and then saloons will be investigated, for under the ordinance they are not permitted to sell milk without a license.